Report of Superintendent of Schools

To the Citizens of Northwood:

In presenting this, my fourth annual report, I am gratified to be able to state that the schools have been maintained without impairment of their efficiency in spite of local and world-wide conditions of economic stress. The country may well look to its educational system in these days for intelligent leadership and useful organization. What are the special duties of our schools in a time of depression? It seems to me that they may be summarized as follows:

1. To administer the public funds with unusual economy. This does not always mean that a decreased expenditure is wise or possible. However, a study of the financial report and budget of the Northwood School District will show some remarkable economies resulting in material savings to the tax-payers without necessarily curtailing the work of the schools seriously. The budget of this year is a reduction of 20% from that of last year and 31% from the appropriations of two years ago. Some of the helpers who will aid in making a slender budget cover as many activities as possible are manufacturers and business firms who pass along decreased prices, school officials who administer affairs with unusual scrutiny, pupils and teachers and parents who cooperate in the economical use of the school plant and supplies, and reasonable consideration by those in the community who furnish goods or services to the schools.

2. To Minister to the Health and Happiness of the Children. In many homes the pinch of depression may be severe enough to affect the physical health of the children. A more alert watch must be kept for signs of impairment. The work of the school nurse becomes even more valuable than ever. Our school nurses are in a position to discover need and set remedial agencies in motion. Moreover, the depression has its effect upon the spirits of the people also, resulting in apprehension and worry. We must not allow this cloud to cast its shadow upon the children. The school as well as the home must be made a place of happiness and good cheer, to counteract the prevalent gloom.

3. To keep boys and girls in school as long as possible, in order that they may be preparing themselves for greater usefulness later instead of competing in the already overloaded labor market. In Northwood we have been able to do this to a remarkable degree, as practically all of our eighth grade graduates go on to high school at the Academy or elsewhere, and Coe's Academy itself this year has several post-graduate students.

The school board is not allowed to pay for such post-graduate tuition. However, parents evidently consider this extra year of secondary studies amply worth the cost.

4. To emphasize the Ideals of Craftsmanship through the Practical Arts. Unemployment has been brought upon us largely through mass production by machinery. But the public will not be altogether satisfied with the uniformity of standardized products. There will be an increasing demand for the fine and distinctive products of the handicraftsman. The so-called "frills" of education, leading (it may be) to an appreciation of music, fine art, and the refinements of life are of powerful economic value in creating this demand for fine workmanship in the future. We can have an overproduction of machine-made goods; but we can never have an overproduction of creative work from real artists and craftsmen.

5. To Prepare for the Return of Prosperity. There was never but one depression which did not result in prosperity, and that is this one. Those sections of the country who have been able and determined to maintain education unimpaired will be in the best position to take early advantage of the inevitable upward trend. Russia is raising the salary of its school teachers as a step in the campaign for economic supremacy in the world. While private educational institutions are undergoing tremendous expansion from the benefit of their accumulated endowments and enormous gifts from individuals and foundations, society must not allow the public schools to be shorn of features designed for the benefit of the common people, which our democracy has won for itself only in the course of a long struggle. Our forefathers established the schools while wrestling with the hardships of the wilderness. With equal prudence and determination this generation can carry them on.

Material improvements during the past year include a furnace at the Narrows and the remedying of certain conditions by action of the firms installing equipment there, reflecting credit upon the honorable dealings of those firms.

Changes in personnel included the retirement of Mrs. Mildred K. Chesley, who was replaced by Miss Mary I. McQuaid, a normal graduate with experience in teaching. Miss Ruth B. Whitcomb, who has been serving us as school nurse with great satisfaction, was transferred to another locality. She was succeeded by Miss Margaret McDonald, R. N. At a dental clinic arranged last year by Miss Whitcomb, and sponsored by the Woman's Club, 47 cases were treated. Miss McDonald gives all of her time to the towns in Union No. 44, which makes for economy of time and improved administrative efficiency. I recommend that consideration be given to the desirability of providing screening against flies and also the installation of electric lights as further aids to health. Our hot lunch in some cases at least is doubtless a real aid in seeing children through the present lean days in good health.

Our teachers have been provided with scientific material whereby every child has been tested on his ability to do school work and his achievement in school subjects. By this means the teachers are better able to deal with individual pupils and to compare the efficiency of their instruction with that throughout the country. They have also done considerable professional reading in magazines and books furnished from the superintendent's office. Schools have also been furnished with material for celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, including colored portraits of the Father of His Country, sent to us by our Congressmen. Our schools also cooperated with the New Hampshire Daniel Webster Commission in distributing commemorative medals.

Respectfully submitted,

CHESTER W. DOE,

Superintendent of Schools.
